

Bedbug Dogs

---

NEDSCA trained bed bug dog will accurately detect the bed bug infestation. First Response Bedbug Dogs provides canine detection services to investigate your premises for bed bugs. Our trained canines search for bed bugs with their noses which is faster and more accurate than any visual search done by a person. Dogs are naturally inclined to stick their noses into every crack and crevice and our dogs have been encouraged to follow this instinct so that no nook or cranny goes unchecked.

Worried that you might have bed bugs in the New York, New Jersey area? Early detection is critical! In small numbers, bed bugs are very hard to detect. It's their small size and their ability to hide in inconspicuous areas that makes visual inspections ineffective. In many situations, there are simply not enough bed bugs present to find them with a visual inspection. Normally, even a visual inspection from a professional exterminator fails because of various reasons. A canine has a very powerful scent capability. The canine's scent is so powerful that it's capable of discovering a bed bug infestation while it's in its earliest stage. Early detection of bed bugs is important because it will prevent the problem from going undetected and worsening. Where Does The Canine Look For Evidence Of A Bed Bug Infestation? Our canine and his handler will inspect your entire area. There are a few areas that are of particular concern: mattresses, bed headboards, bed frames,

Commerical Services

Re you a property owner or property manger with a bedbug infestation? Get immediate support to protect your tenants and your investment by bed bug removal. Bedbugs in the home? The Bed Bug Inspectors will locate and provide advice on bed bug removal.

In small numbers, bed bugs are very hard to detect. It's their small size and their ability to hide in inconspicuous areas that makes visual inspections ineffective. In many situations, there are simply not enough bed bugs present to find them with a visual inspection.

Normally, even a visual inspection from a professional exterminator fails because of various reasons. A canine has a very powerful scent capability. The canine's scent is so powerful that it's capable of discovering a bed bug infestation while it's in its earliest stage. Early detection of bed bugs is important because it will prevent the problem from going undetected and worsening.

Once your home or business is certified free of bed bugs, First Response Bedbug Dogs can help you set up a prevention plan. Effective prevention plans can eliminate much of the worry and cost that comes with a bed bug infestation. Working with experts in the field can help ensure that your preventative measures are the best available.

First Response Bedbug Dogs is available for annual preventative checks, confirmation of suspected infestations and consultations. Our services are available in all parts of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut. Free estimates are available when you call so give us a call right away if you need bed bug detection services.

Dogs have noses that are thousands of times more sensitive than humans. They are used to sniff out drugs, bombs, and even cancer cells. Their noses are even sensitive enough to differentiate between the dead remains of a past bed bug infestation and the live bugs that make up a current one.

First Response Bedbug Dogs takes advantage of the amazing nose of a dog to bring you effective detection. Our handler and dog teams will confirm & pinpoint the bed bug infestation.

A free estimate is available if you give us a call. It's that easy to get started. We are fast, discreet and proven to be 98% accurate in the detection of bed bugs.

First Response Bedbug Dogs serves all locations within the states of NY, NJ and CT. Whether you are a business or a private home our dogs can sniff out & treat your bed bug problem.

Our NEDSCA trained bed bug dog will accurately detect the bed bug infestation. First Response Bedbug Dogs provides canine detection services to investigate your premises for bed bugs. Our trained canines search for bed bugs with their noses which is faster and more accurate than any visual search done by a person. Dogs are naturally inclined to stick their noses into every crack and crevice and our dogs have been encouraged to follow this instinct so that no nook or cranny goes unchecked.

Our trained dogs sniff every part of your home that could be infested with bed bugs including:

- Seams of mattresses, box springs and furniture
- Baseboards and carpet edges
- Curtains and fabric shades
- Clutter and clothing near beds and furniture
- Chairs and sofas
- Electrical switchplates and outlets
- Items such as bed frames, lamps, dressers and nightstands

A visual inspection by a trained human technician can take over an hour and has a 25 percent accuracy on average. The same inspection by a dog takes just minutes and is over 98 percent accurate. People who choose to have their premises inspected by bed bug dogs can avoid unnecessary and expensive extermination treatments if they do not have an infestation or can feel good about the necessity of such treatments if they do.

Homeowners and residents can get peace of mind from knowing that their property is free of bed bugs or confirmation that they need extermination treatments. Businesses such as hotels and motels proudly display their certificates of inspection to show that they are bed bug free. Thanks to the ever-increasing epidemic of bed bugs, being certified bed bug free can be great for business.

Once your home or business is certified free of bed bugs, First Response Bedbug Dogs can help you set up a prevention plan. Effective prevention plans can eliminate much of the worry and cost that comes with a bed bug infestation. Working with experts in the field can help ensure that your preventative measures are the best available.

First Response Bedbug Dogs is available for annual preventative checks, confirmation of suspected infestations and consultations. Our services are available in all parts of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut. Free estimates are available when you call so give us a call right away if you need bed bug detection services.

Where Does The Canine Look For Evidence Of A Bed Bug Infestation

Our canine and his handler will inspect your entire area. There are a few areas that are of particular concern: mattresses, bed headboards, bed frames, night stands and box springs are some of the target areas that should be inspected. There are many other locations in a home that bed bugs can takeover. Some other areas that are of interest include under telephones, lamps and other appliances. A few areas that are considered bed bug hot spots are baseboards and carpet edges. Over 90 percent of all bed bug activity is normally found close to where homeowners sleep. In many cases, bed bugs will also infest areas that homeowners spend a lot of time such as recliners or other types of chairs. Bed bugs have even been found hiding out inside of electrical outlets, and this is why a thorough inspection is so important. There is really no limit to where a bed bug can hide. These bugs are very small, fast and stealthy.

Sadly, many people attempt to handle their bed bug situation alone, and this is basically the worst course of action that is possible. In many situations, bed bugs can easily blend with their surroundings, and it takes special inspection methods to find them. By allowing an infestation to get worse, homeowners are putting themselves through much more agony than is necessary.

For more Information please visit our website
<http://www.firstresponsebedbugdogs.com>